Harris has a strong heritage of providing high precision, lightweight mirrors for space and ground based applications. This presentation will review several examples of programs that have leveraged this capability over the past 50 years. The technical advancements that will be needed to meet the needs of next generation space-based systems will also be described.