

Miguel A. Alonso received the degree of engineer in physics in 1990 from the Universidad Autonoma Metropolitana in Mexico City and received the PhD degree in Optics in 1996 from the Institute of Optics, University of Rochester. In 2003, he joined the faculty of the Institute of Optics. He was first associate editor and then deputy editor for optics express from 2002 to 2013. He is now associate editor for Optica, chair of Spotlight on Optics, and a fellow of the Optical Society of America.